I married a goblin to rank up as an adventurer J.H. Hart

Rusty Blade is your not so typical Low rank adventurer. He's one hundred and fifty years old and only rank D. Since adventures can only die in battle Rusty has lived long enough to see everyone he knew either die or rank up without him. He never gave up and one day it finally pays off when he meets a high level goblin in the forest. The goblin offers him a method to rank up that includes marrying the daughter of the goblin chief.

This is a short series that I'm writing while I work on other projects like "Demon Party". You can go ahead and judge this one by its cover. Thanks!

Great start

Great story so far. A fun read. It could have used a little more character development and maybe be a bit longer like maybe 200 pages at least but over all great short story very enjoyable.

Miles Trombley says

What happens when an adventurer marries a monster?

The title says it, which pretty much sums up this short story. A swordsman marries a goblin so he can level up. The humor is very decent and the plot is simple. Not much world building, but the characters are entertaining. It reads like a light novel, except it is shorter. One of the problems I had was the grammar, and the dialogue that doesn't mention who is telling who. It confused me on which character is speaking. But I still think for monster girl lovers who want to read simple shorts, they will get a kick out of this one. If you are expecting an epic fantasy with world building that reads longer, this book isn't for you.

Good start for a story meant for a few laughs

Good start, could use more work but the errors arnt horrible like alot of beginning writers seems to make. Ill check the 2nd book out as well.
